Is John Kerry A Liberal? 13 October 2004

Is he the most liberal member of the current or any Senate since the end of World War II? No. Is he an extreme left of the mean of the Senate Democrats serving since 1937. I show this fact using Common Space Scores. The roll calls cast in the House and Senate for the 1937 - 2002 period. The technical details can be found in my article "Economic Liberalism: A New Paradigm," American Journal of Political Science, 42 (July 1998), pp. 954-993.

NOMINATE Data, Roll Call Data, and Software

Below is a plot of the first (Liberal-Conservative) dimension of the Common Space Scores. (Below the plot I show, in order, from left to right all 3,320 individuals that served in the House and Senate from 1937 - 2002.) The histograms are for Democrats and Republicans in the two Chambers. Senator Kerry (D-MA) is located at -.366 which is to the left of the mean of the Senate Democrats, -.243 (standard deviation, .187). Senator Edwards (D-NC) is located at -.239 which is almost exactly on the mean. Senator Kennedy (D-MA) is located at -.476. President Bush is located at .408 which is to the right of the means of both the Senate Republicans, .271 (standard deviation, .187), and the House Republicans, .300 (standard deviation, .158). Vice President Cheney is located at .517 and former Senate Helms (R-NC) is located at .658.

Below is a listing from left to right of all 3,320 individuals who served in either or both the House and the Senate from 1937 to 2002. Senator Kerry is number 478 and President Bush is number 2,971. The Common Space Score is the number in the furthest right column. (These scores are very highly correlated with the corresponding DW-NOMINATE Scores by Chamber.) Note that the Presidents are also shown in the coordinates below. Their coordinates are based upon Presidential Support Roll Calls compiled by Congressional Quarterly. These are typically a fraction of the total roll calls cast so the Presidential scores are very noisy compared to the members of Congress.
